Chapter 2 : Sermon: Making Adequate Travel Plans

I'm presuming that you've got a non-refundable fare otherwise this is a fairly pointless question - just contact the airline, cancel your ticket, and get your money back. If it's not a refundable fare, the best option is to NOT cancel it - yet.

Of course my final destination is always Dubai, so what now? The Etihad Express Shuttle. This bad boy runs between the two cities multiple times a day. It is quick, comfortable and even includes free bottled water and snack. As such it is possible to catch a free ride if you know what to do. Showing your Etihad Airlines ticket stub from just a few minutes or few hours earlier will get you on the shuttle, simple as that. They have no way of checking this in the waiting area or aboard the shuttle. Simply look up the shuttle schedule for the day in question and then make yourself a fake email confirmation letter a common practice among long-term travelers for a variety of reasons with that shuttle information included. Here is the one I made: After all no one checks the from address when looking at email confirmations. Armed with your free shuttle ticket exit out Terminal 1 of Abu Dhabi airport, bypass the touts and head right over and across the drop-off lanes. Here is the designated shuttle area. In fact there are dozens of passed out people all around me as I type this. This trick will in theory also work headed the opposite direction, from Dubai to Abu Dhabi. However as the shuttle departs from the Etihad Mall and not Dubai International Airport, it is not quite as convenient. Additional travel hacking posts will be a regular feature here at The HoliDaze. Children under the age of 17 do not need an ID to fly, so no need to worry if you're traveling with younger children or if your young teenager has lost her ID. Can I Order a Flight Ticket.

And so, after a number of years I took a few dual lessons again last year, and what struck me was how much single engine land had changed over the years. Symbolically, the change from the plain white paper ticket to the current secure plastic card with hologram, yet! We used a Cessna 85 hp not locked, no key! Tuning the radio no earphones used an internal calibrator and to tune to a channel you tuned for zero-beat non-radio amateurs: In due time there came the lesson to do my first takeoff. Now in those days there was no tailwheel endorsement; taildraggers were simply it. Have you ever tried pulling a grocery shopping cart and feel how it wants to whip? Like the whipping shopping cart, this produced an overcompensation, which then caused me to overcorrect the other way. So our zig-zags across that wide runway increased in amplitude, and very soon I went from one side of the runway to the other with tires squeaking toward the end. We really had more than enough flying speed by that time, but the CFI just wanted to make me aware of the dynamics. Take your time, move that rudder slowly! And then my first solo when my regular CFI mentioned that perhaps I was getting ready for that important step. So at my next appointment I was somewhat shocked that this time the senior instructor greeted me. Did that hp Cessna want to fly without that second person! Scared and happy at the same time. The first solo cross-country was anti-climactic. Ground school in preparation for the flight test was minimal, which may have been partly my fault. I had always been interested in the physics of weather and solving wind triangles was easy for me because they normally involve narrow triangles, and solving those with approximations is common in electrical engineering. I had reserved an hour of solo on a very cold day. It turned out that it was necessary to take the Cessna inside and get rid of some snow and frost. As I took off I noticed that I had no airspeed indication the little flap covering the pitot tube had frozen shut. No problem, of course. Ah, yes, things were different, and, in a way, I think, more fun, more carefree. But with the increase in air traffic and the sometimes excessive I think safety considerations, it is nice to have an organization, such as EAA trying to keep alive some of that spirit of adventure and independence.

I knew ALL the extra costs, read the negative reviews. No way Spirit could pull the wool over my eyes. As my only stipulation was that it was a flight sometime in January to a Central American country, I had the flexibility to work with the agents to find a very cheap flight. I got an e-mail from Spirit saying that my flight had been delayed. Now I would only have 20 minutes to make my flight to Panama City. Here were the infamous delays the reviews talked about. I could handle delays. As long as I eventually made it to Panama City, I was okay. I let go of my attachment to the outcome and thank God I did! A few hours later, I got another e-mail saying that my flight was delayed again. Now I would be getting to Fort Lauderdale after my flight to Panama had already left. The only option given in the e-mail was to manage my flight online or call customer service. I checked online and the flight to Fort Lauderdale before mine had been canceled. I called customer service. I would go to the airport and everything would be worked out. When I arrived in NYC, I checked my e-mail again to find a notification that my flight had been cancelled. I went to manage my flight online and the only option was to change my flight to the 20th or the 23rd. The only thing to do was go to the airport. No Help To Be Found I knew the agents at the airport were probably frazzled from people being angry about the canceled flight. I took a deep breath and put my friendly customer face on. I calmly explained to the agent that my flight to Panama was leaving on time I might add from Fort Lauderdale tonight, and how could I make that flight? The only help they could offer was telling me to try to get a ticket with Jet Blue to Fort Lauderdale. No explanation as to why the flights were canceled there was no bad weather as far as I could tell. So back to the Spirit counter. That I would have to wait until Monday. Thankfully, while I was talking to the various agents, my mom was researching flights leaving that night. I got a full refund from Spirit Airlines. After reading reviews from other people after the fact, I got lucky. Then, I had to head from Laguardia to Newark no easy feat, as anyone who has done it can attest. A few hours later I was on my way to Panama. With a whole row of seats to myself, I might add. From the fact that their social media is all automated to the unhelpful customer service reps on the phone, Spirit makes it clear that they could give a crap about their customer. In fact, it stands to reason that if they treat their customers in such a poor manner, one can only imagine their employees are treated far worse. Flights are canceled with no explanation and no help to get you to your destination. From other reviews I read, my flight was not the only one canceled that day. Just from doing a quick Twitter search I found at least 10 other people all around the country that had canceled flights. From my research before booking my flight, I knew that Spirit has a small fleet which can cause lots of delays and even cancellations. What I did not know to expect was that when your flight gets delayed or canceled, Spirit will offer no recourse on how to actually get to your destination. This is just the truth. Stay detached, friendly in the face of rude customer service, and constantly open to changing your plans. Then you may want to fly with Spirit Airlines. Otherwise, please, stay away. I would add two things: first a flight from the Narrows Bridge down the Hudson River, past the Statue of Liberty at $€² is breath taking; secondly continue north down the river to Old Rhinebeck Airport to see the old airplanes fly-wonderful.

There you will wait in-line until its your turn to heave your bag on the scale, present your airport ID , and get your boarding pass issued, along with a baggage tag receipt. Make sure your bag is unlocked, or has a TSA-approved lock. Checking in with only Carry-on Bags. Should you be traveling light and have only a carry-on bag, your best bet is to look for one of those nifty self check-in ticket kiosks machine - most major airlines have them at most airports. That way you can avoid the lines at the check-in ticket counters. Self Check-in Ticket Kiosks. These are machines which allow you to insert your ID - usually a valid credit card for validation - and print a boarding pass without having to wait on line at the check-in counter. If you select yes, you will be assisted by an airline ticket counter agent. Getting thru Airport Security The next step after getting your boarding pass will be to proceed through airport security. Follow the signs to your gate, as there may be a security checkpoint at the entrance to several groups of gates. To avoid any delays, here is what you should be prepared for when entering the airport security checkpoint: Make sure any sharp objects, files, scissors or other items are in your checked bags. Be prepared to remove your shoes, belt, watch, and anything that has a substantial metal content. Bins are provided to keep lose items together. Remove your laptop from its case or bag, and place that in a separate bin. Should you get something to eat before you catch your flight? Look for departure monitors as you proceed, checking on the latest status and gate yes, they can change of your flight. Boarding typically begins about 30 mins prior to the scheduled departure time, so be sure to arrive there in time. You may risk losing your assigned seat or even your flight if you show up too late. Check your boarding pass. Most airlines board by zones or rows. Listen to the announcements regarding boarding, and proceed when your row section or zone is called. You will pass an airline gate agent, who will take your boarding pass and may ask for ID. If you printed out a boarding pass at home, you will surrender it there for a bar-code scan. Embark the plane, find your seat, and make sure you do not put anything too large under the seat in front of you, as the flight attendant may ask you to put it in the overhead bin. Then fasten your seatbelt
