

One of his best! FXHE Records -- B / F Producer, Mixed By -- Alex Omar Smith Mastered by Carl @ Trutone, NY Support the artist, buy it here.

When did dating become so complicated? It almost seems that the more options for meeting someone that there are, the harder it is to actually find the right someone. Surely, something should work. Asking friends to introduce you to someone is still one of the best ways to find Mr. Your friends know you and should be able to assess who would be a good fit. Unless they have a nasty sense of humor. Try not to have friends like that. Could be a waste. Could be money well-spent, if it works. Only single people allowed. Ask invitees to bring other single friends. This is an informal online social networking site that facilitates offline group meetings of like-minded people for a range of activities, including dining, bowling, hiking, cooking, biking, etc. Some are focused on singles, some not. Either way, it could be a way to have some fun while making new friends. I prefer this to Match. I want to check out eye contact, body language, voice inflection right away, not after 5 emails. This is not an exhaustive list of online dating sites, but these are among the most popular. They all work pretty much the same. Apparently, one out of five couples have met online. Grouper says 93 percent of participants want to do another one. Currently, the service is about twice as popular with women. An OKCupid profile is not required, but it makes it much easier. The name of this app sounds about right to me. Other Blind Date Apps. These apps set up blind dates for you. All you have to do is just show up and hope to be pleasantly surprised. Clearly, it can go the other way, as well. Tinder is location-based and identifies people nearby who the user might know, and connects them if both are interested. I wonder what it all means? Are we seriously looking for The One, or does having this many options make it harder than ever? How can you choose just One, when there are so many? I just decided to give online dating a try again and was particularly taken with HowAboutWe, which gives you the opportunity to post date ideas and to respond to those that interest you. Even worse, they fail to reply when you respond to their intrigue. There was also a nut job who sent a highly offensive e-mail and I alerted the service. So to conclude, I agree that too many choices may be partly to blame. I also think that people are different now and less willing to compromise and do what it takes to find and sustain a relationship. My parents have been married for almost six decades.

Chapter 2 : The Temptations - The further you look, the less you see Lyrics

Lyrics to "The Further You Look, The Less You See" song by The Temptations: Many a man has gone away Many a man has gone astray Searching for the treasures of a love that's true.

Ndubuisi Obi Hon Abdulmumin Jibrin, remember him? Last week the Speaker, Hon Yakubu Dogara named him as the chairman of the House Committee on Land Transport, after a minor reshuffling of standing committees of the House. However, about one year after, he was removed from his exalted Committee seat. Apparently incensed by his removal as Appropriations Committee chair, the Kano lawmaker launched an offensive against the House leadership. Apart from dragging the leadership through the mud for allegedly padding the Appropriation Act, Jibrin open a can of worms on alleged financial misconduct by the principal officers and some other members of the House, and watched a relentless media campaigns against them. Following the adoption of a motion moved by the then chairman of the House Committee on Rules and Business Hon Emmanuel Orker-Jev, calling for an investigation of alleged breach of the collective privilege of members of the House, the former Appropriation Committee chairman was referred to the Ethics and Privileges Committee. In a matter days, the Ethics and Privileges headed by Hon Nicholas Ossai reported back to the House and delivered a guilty verdict on Jibrin. The House quickly adopted the report and slammed a legislative day suspension on him on September In addition barred from holding any office in the remaining part of his tenure, adding that the lawmaker would be be readmitted into the House at expiration of his suspension, if he tenders an unreserved apology to it. After much shakara, Jibrin, who had challenged his suspension in court tendered an apology to the Green Chamber and was subsequently re-admitted into the House, in March this year, after 18 months in the cold. When the former Appropriation Committee chairman tendered an apology, which in any case Dogara did not read to the House at plenary, I had wondered why the lawmaker would chicken out in his fight against the House. But with the turn of events, there might just be more to the whole issue than meets the eyes. A case of the more you look, the less you see. The last week appointment of Jibrin, as chair of the Land Transport Committee, while the resolution barring him from holding office in the 8th Assembly still subsists, brings to question once again the worth of House resolutions. As a matter of fact, before his recent appointment as substantive chairman of a standing committee, the Kano lawmaker few weeks after his readmission into the House was appointed to head an ad hoc committee to probe the utilization of funds recovered from late Head of State, General Sani Abacha. The only member, Hon Aliyu Madaki, who was seemingly going to differ from the majority on the issue, was repeatedly ruled out of order by the Speaker. It is a big puzzle that after the whole braggadocio by the House, the House abandoned its resolution. No doubt, there is nothing wrong with the House changing its mind about Jibrin or on any other issue for that matter. But since the Green chamber adopted a report of its Ethics and Privileges Committee barring him from holding any office in this session of the assembly, methinks the appropriate thing for the House to have done was to first rescinded that decision before anything else. A number of times I have expressed disappointment with the executive arm of government for showing disdain for legislative resolutions. Even members of the House on several occasions have cried out that they pass resolutions after resolutions, yet nothing tangible comes from them. How would the executive respect House resolutions, when the legislature itself has scant regard for its own resolution. Is it not said that charity begins from home? My take away from the entire issue is that one should not be overly excited when our politicians drag themselves in the mud over issues. They might just be fighting for their own selfish interest and not for the public good, as they would want us to believe.

Chapter 3 : Dating: The Further You Look, The Less You See | Eleanore Wells

Our new desktop experience was built to be your music destination. Listen to official albums & more.

In a matter days, the Ethics and Privileges headed by Hon Nicholas Ossai reported back to the House and delivered a guilty verdict on Jibrin. Ndubuisi Obi Hon Abdulmumin Jibrin, remember him? Last week the Speaker, Hon Yakubu Dogara named him as the chairman of the House Committee on Land Transport, after a minor reshuffling of standing committees of the House. However, about one year after, he was removed from his exalted Committee seat. Apparently incensed by his removal as Appropriations Committee chair, the Kano lawmaker launched an offensive against the House leadership. Apart from dragging the leadership through the mud for allegedly padding the Appropriation Act, Jibrin open a can of worms on alleged financial misconduct by the principal officers and some other members of the House, and watched a relentless media campaigns against them. Following the adoption of a motion moved by the then chairman of the House Committee on Rules and Business Hon Emmanuel Orker-Jev, calling for an investigation of alleged breach of the collective privilege of members of the House, the former Appropriation Committee chairman was referred to the Ethics and Privileges Committee. The House quickly adopted the report and slammed a legislative day suspension on him on September In addition barred from holding any office in the remaining part of his tenure, adding that the lawmaker would be be readmitted into the House at expiration of his suspension, if he tenders an unreserved apology to it. After much shakara, Jibrin, who had challenged his suspension in court tendered an apology to the Green Chamber and was subsequently re-admitted into the House, in March this year, after 18 months in the cold. When the former Appropriation Committee chairman tendered an apology, which in any case Dogara did not read to the House at plenary, I had wondered why the lawmaker would chicken out in his fight against the House. But with the turn of events, there might just be more to the whole issue than meets the eyes. A case of the more you look, the less you see. The last week appointment of Jibrin, as chair of the Land Transport Committee, while the resolution barring him from holding office in the 8th Assembly still subsists, brings to question once again the worth of House resolutions. As a matter of fact, before his recent appointment as substantive chairman of a standing committee, the Kano lawmaker few weeks after his readmission into the House was appointed to head an ad hoc committee to probe the utilization of funds recovered from late Head of State, General Sani Abacha. The only member, Hon Aliyu Madaki, who was seemingly going to differ from the majority on the issue, was repeatedly ruled out of order by the Speaker. It is a big puzzle that after the whole braggadocio by the House, the House abandoned its resolution. No doubt, there is nothing wrong with the House changing its mind about Jibrin or on any other issue for that matter. But since the Green chamber adopted a report of its Ethics and Privileges Committee barring him from holding any office in this session of the assembly, methinks the appropriate thing for the House to have done was to first rescinded that decision before anything else. A number of times I have expressed disappointment with the executive arm of government for showing disdain for legislative resolutions. Even members of the House on several occasions have cried out that they pass resolutions after resolutions, yet nothing tangible comes from them. How would the executive respect House resolutions, when the legislature itself has scant regard for its own resolution. Is it not said that charity begins from home?

Chapter 4 : Jibrin: The more you look, the less you see – Voiceheadlines

The Further You Look, the Less You See Lyrics: Many a man has gone away / Many a man has gone astray / Searching for the treasures of a love that's true / I'm hoping that my treasure can be you.

In a matter days, the Ethics and Privileges headed by Hon Nicholas Ossai reported back to the House and delivered a guilty verdict on Jibrin. Ndubuisi Obi Hon Abdulumumin Jibrin, remember him? Last week the Speaker, Hon Yakubu Dogara named him as the chairman of the House Committee on Land Transport, after a minor reshuffling of standing committees of the House. However, about one year after, he was removed from his exalted Committee seat. Apparently incensed by his removal as Appropriations Committee chair, the Kano lawmaker launched an offensive against the House leadership. Apart from dragging the leadership through the mud for allegedly padding the Appropriation Act, Jibrin open a can of worms on alleged financial misconduct by the principal officers and some other members of the House, and watched a relentless media campaigns against them. Following the adoption of a motion moved by the then chairman of the House Committee on Rules and Business Hon Emmanuel Orker-Jev, calling for an investigation of alleged breach of the collective privilege of members of the House, the former Appropriation Committee chairman was referred to the Ethics and Privileges Committee. The House quickly adopted the report and slammed a legislative day suspension on him on September In addition barred from holding any office in the remaining part of his tenure, adding that the lawmaker would be be readmitted into the House at expiration of his suspension, if he tenders an unreserved apology to it. After much shakara, Jibrin, who had challenged his suspension in court tendered an apology to the Green Chamber and was subsequently re-admitted into the House, in March this year, after 18 months in the cold. When the former Appropriation Committee chairman tendered an apology, which in any case Dogara did not read to the House at plenary, I had wondered why the lawmaker would chicken out in his fight against the House. But with the turn of events, there might just be more to the whole issue than meets the eyes. A case of the more you look, the less you see. The last week appointment of Jibrin, as chair of the Land Transport Committee, while the resolution barring him from holding office in the 8th Assembly still subsists, brings to question once again the worth of House resolutions. As a matter of fact, before his recent appointment as substantive chairman of a standing committee, the Kano lawmaker few weeks after his readmission into the House was appointed to head an ad hoc committee to probe the utilization of funds recovered from late Head of State, General Sani Abacha. The only member, Hon Aliyu Madaki, who was seemingly going to differ from the majority on the issue, was repeatedly ruled out of order by the Speaker. It is a big puzzle that after the whole braggadocio by the House, the House abandoned its resolution. No doubt, there is nothing wrong with the House changing its mind about Jibrin or on any other issue for that matter. But since the Green chamber adopted a report of its Ethics and Privileges Committee barring him from holding any office in this session of the assembly, methinks the appropriate thing for the House to have done was to first rescinded that decision before anything else. A number of times I have expressed disappointment with the executive arm of government for showing disdain for legislative resolutions. Even members of the House on several occasions have cried out that they pass resolutions after resolutions, yet nothing tangible comes from them. How would the executive respect House resolutions, when the legislature itself has scant regard for its own resolution. Is it not said that charity begins from home? My take away from the entire issue is that one should not be overly excited when our politicians drag themselves in the mud over issues. They might just be fighting for their own selfish interest and not for the public good, as they would want us to believe.

Chapter 5 : Temptations - The Further You Look, The Less You See Lyrics | MetroLyrics

The further you look, the less you see. I'm hoping you'll be the treasure for me " This occurred to me as I read yet another article about the latest "tools" that facilitate finding The One.

Chapter 6 : The Temptations The Further You Look, the Less You See æ-Œè©ž

DOWNLOAD PDF THE FURTHER YOU LOOK, THE LESS YOU SEE

*The further you look, You better know that The less you see So I'm hoping you'd be the treasure meant for me.
Oh-oh-ooohh-oh Travel, travelling on Wondering if they've done something wrong.*

Chapter 7 : What is the meaning of the phrase "The more you look, the less you see". ? | Yahoo Answers

The Further You Look, The Less You See Lyrics: Many a man has gone away / Many a man has gone astray / Searching for the treasures of a love that's true / I'm hoping that my treasure can be.

Chapter 8 : Jibrin: The more you look, the less you see “ 9jacable

The Further You Look, The Less You See This song is by The Temptations and appears on the album Meet The Temptations () and on the album Emperors Of Soul ().

Chapter 9 : John Holt - The Further You Look (The Less You See) | ()

The Temptations. The Temptations are an American vocal group known for their success in the 60s and 70s at Motown Records. The group's repertoire has included, during its five-decade career, R&B, doo-wop, funk, disco, soul, and adult contemporary music.