Plot[edit] Van Helsing is set in the near future, where vampires have risen and taken control. Vanessa Van Helsing, a descendant of Abraham Van Helsing , awakens from a three-year coma after her supposed death to find herself in a post-apocalyptic world. With this secret weapon, Vanessa becomes a prime target for the vampires. In Season Two she journeys east towards a safe haven in Colorado and discovers her long lost sister who has been trained to kill vampires since birth. Jonathan Scarfe as Axel, a former Marine with unwavering devotion and loyalty to both duty and Vanessa, despite years of isolation. Christopher Heyerdahl as Sam, a deaf survivor of the Rising who relies on his strength and observational skills to stay alive. Now turned into a serial killer vampire and a minor antagonist. David Cubitt as John, a survivor of the Rising whose actions are fueled by anger, prejudice, suspicion and fear. He was killed by Vanessa after a knife and severed fingers were found in his bag. Unfortunately, Sam turned out to be the real serial killer, not John. He became one of the first vampires turned by Julius during the Rising. As a result, he was cured and regained his humanity. She was a vampire before being cured by Vanessa. She struggled with being turned human again and, after abandoning Axel to die, tried to get a vampire to turn her back. Trezzo Mahoro as Mohamad seasons 1–2; guest season 3 , a happy guy, despite all of the evil in the world. He and Sam have a strong bond. He is killed by Vanessa in episode 1 because he told the vampires of her existence and offered to let them into the hospital to get her. Laura Mennell as Rebecca season 1, and episode 2. Paul Johansson as Dmitri seasons 1–2 , a vampire turned long before the Rising. He is now the patient and calculating leader of the vampires. Aleks Paunovic as Julius main, season 1; recurring, season 2–present , a former vampire that existed for some time before The Rising as a warlord, though now he was turned human by Vanessa and now serves her. She was later cured upon reuniting with Vanessa before being killed by Sam. Hannah Chera as Dylan, daughter of Vanessa. He is killed when a resistance cell is uncovered in an ambush inadvertently set up by Sheema. Gia Crovatin as Atanasia seasons 1–2 , an ancient vampire like her brother Dmitri. She was killed by Scarlett. Terry Chen as Brendan season 1 , the effective leader of a group of survivors from Idaho. They take over the hospital, imprisoning Alex and the others. Alex sends him and the remaining Idaho survivors out of the hospital to fend for themselves, as this was what they had done to Mahomad and planned to do to Alex and co. Sarah Desjardins as Catherine season 1 , a member of a group of survivors from Idaho, who were lucky enough to be rescued by Vanessa as they passed through Seattle. She is killed by vampires after being banished. Christina Jastrzemska as Mama season 1 , mother of Julius, as well as a member of his Brood. Macie Juiles as Callie, a member of a group of survivors from Idaho, who after being saved Vanessa, forged a bond with her. She is known for everyone around her dying but she always survives. Avery Konrad as Cynthia season 1 , an average teenage girl that somehow managed to survive The Rising for as long as she did. Duncan Ollerenshaw as Dr. She was found out and used as a Judas sheep to trap other members of the resistance. Alison Wandzura as Nicole season 1 , a survivor held up in the Seattle Valley General Hospital until it was over run with vampires. Gwynyth Walsh as Magdalene season 1 , an ex-wife of Micah, and is in allegiance with Julius. Caroline Cave as Jolene season 2–present , a triage nurse in a camp of human survivors. Jennifer Cheon as Ivory season 2–present , the eventual leader of The Sisterhood, an all-female faction of very powerful vampires. John Reardon as Dr. Harrison seasons 2–3 , a human performing experiments involving vampirism in a mountain fortress. She shares a mysterious connection to the Van Helsing. Colleen Winton as Abigail, a scientist who works with Dr. Harrison seasons 2–3 , and claims to share a past relationship with Vanessa. Michael Jonsson as Barry season 3 Development and production[edit] Syfy acquired Van Helsing from Nomadic Pictures in November , with a episode order beginning production in January , and a series premiere scheduled for Fall On December 19, , Syfy renewed Van Helsing for a episode third season.

Twenty-two masters of horror and fantasy give Van Helsing, the vampire hunter from Bram Stoker's Dracula, his due as they reimagine the adventures of the greatest foe of the most evil vampire in literary history. However this seem to include characters called Edward and Jon Van Helsing. The "van" in his name is like the "of" in Robin of Locksley, its not written in capital. Yes I know that Bram Stoker himself wrote the name this way, but thats not a reason to write it wrong like he did. So if it would be a real Dutch surname then it would be written "van Helsing" and not "Van Helsing". I know nothing about how to speak Dutch, so it is impossible for me to say wheather the Duch langauge has adopted the "van" into last names. Something in the back of my head is saying that in English, however, people of Germanic origins have often done so. At the end of the day, however, this point is moot. Stoker clearly intended "Van Helsing" to function, in its entirty, as a last name. The character is always called "Van Helsing," never just "Helsing," and always with a capital "V. Without the first name, it should be with a capital so: De Wit, Van den Akker. Only when the name is used without anything, the "van" gets capitalised, like in "Van Helsing did this or that". On the other hand, Dracula is an English text and does not pretend to observe the fine points of Dutch capitalization. Van Helsing, as seen in The Brides of Dracula. With names, pretty much anything goes in Dutch. Both are equally correct. He generally speaks English approximatively, redundantly, filling it with biblical allusions - while Dracula is also a foreigner but speaks English without accent. But when he is in agitation, he suddenly begins to speak correctly. When Van Helsing is upset, he begins speaking German: People often adopt single phrases from other languages, especially since the Dutch tradition is multilingual and the character is a doctor. In addition to his grammatial quirks such as referring to inanimate objects as "he", and calling Dr. Seward "Friend John" , he very often makes reference and allusion to many different authors and works of literature in his speech, and such. Rei-Ginsei moved the article to Van Helsing Novel Character , saying in the edit history "Abraham is subject to frequent change in the movies. Half of which dont even reveal first name. Rei-Ginsei has moved this page again. I find this rather absurd. This article is clearly about the original character "Abraham Van Helsing," from the novel. The article rightfully mentions variant names in various adaptations at the bottom of the article, but I do not believe that this is a reason for an article move. If anything, it indicates that this page operates at the exclusion of film adaptations, where the original title did not. The way the Dracula, and Frankenstein pages, should be more about the overall pop-culture phenomana of the franchises, than the original works? Both the Dracula and the Frankenstein articles are about the novels by that name. All other uses are incidental, or belong in separate articles. This makes it easier for everyone to keep track of who says what on a talk page. I became confused with all the moves and edits, and you did not in fact blank the material that I thought you had. I took this statement to mean that his wife was dead. Please correct me if I am wrong. It was still much closer to German, even more in 15th Century. Dutch from 15th "Erlösen sal hi in vrede siele mine van dien die genaken mi, want onder menegen hi was met mi". We say now Verlossen. There are several other references to Amsterdam and one to Holland he was "brought in all the way from Holland to look after Lucy". In that period, no Dutchman would say the phrase "Gott in Himmel" as if it were proper Dutch. Any assumption that in that period Dutch and German were more or less the same or hardly distinguishable, is simply wrong. One of the most available pieces of Dutch literature from that period is "Max Havelaar" by Multatuli, which is also available in its original spelling. This should be referenced, since to my knowledge, the only notable Abraham Van Helsing is the fictional character in Dracula, who has spawned a host of equally fictional imitations. I cannot recall that Van Helsing wanted to harm him in any way. He is just interested in the clues he can provide about Dracula. I propose to remove it from there.
