Share this on WhatsApp Friendships, Relationship are the two most sensitive knots that have to be knitted with care. So it is our great responsibility to keep in touch with every relation and friends. This article of keep in touch consists of messages for who really want to build a strong relation with their loving and caring ones. A friend is merely not a coincidence to come into your life, they are meant to enter into your life with a purpose to make you happy and smile forever. I treasure our friendship; keep in touch my dear friend! Lock and key, Sun and brightness, Flower and honey, my Heart and your friendship are the inseparable things in this world. Keep in touch dear. A simple word of Hello will keep the relation and friendship keep going, keep in touch. I really treasure few people who make my world a complete world and you are one among those, keep in touch forever and make me happy forever! If anyone asks me what is more important to you, me or your life, I would say my life because you are my life my dear friend and you mean so much to me. Keep in touch with me and make my life a meaningful one. Keep and stay in touch! Preserving your friendship and keeping in touch with your close friends is like standing on wet cement and leaving your footprints onto it, it lasts forever. Even though we may not have spent so much time together, but you are always in my thoughts my dear friend. You are my best friend and you have all the qualities of being my mother, father, brother and sister. You are the best gift of God who has given you as a special gift. Do not forget to keep in touch with me my friend! I will always keep in touch with my friends and expect the same from them. There may be thousands of reasons for our cry, but there may be few reasons for our smile and you my friend, you are one among those few reasons for my smile. Keep in touch with me my great friend! If we happen to miss someone we mean so much then that would be the worst thing in a relationship. At such situations we ask those persons to stay in touch with us forever and ever. Stay in touch article contains wordings to make someone to stay with us forever even when critical situations occur. Below you find heart touching sentences to reach the person who are not staying in touch with you. It takes years to build up a relation, but few seconds to break it. I take care to keep our relation going without any breakups. Stay in touch with me forever to keep the relation going. I am missing you so much for some reasons for past few years; please stay in touch with me after seeing this message from me. You be there for me, stay with me forever. I wish you to stay with me all throughout my life, to count my days of success with your presence. So you please stay and stick on to my life. In the garden of friendship, affection, care, encouragements are the seeds to have healthy and colorful flowers. It is our duty to take care of the flowers very often by watering them by staying in touch with our close ones, if kept without taking care of them then the flowers of friendship gets withered there. Thanks for sticking around me in the entire path I travel, stay with me forever and ever and make our relation the best set sample for others. A person who means so much to you in your life is the one to be preserved with care, so stay in touch with me! Running my life without you is so hard, so please stay in touch with me all the time. No one is going to come along with you all the way; there are people to watch you over when you cry and people to envy you when you smile on your success. There are few who sees your worry as their worry and your happiness as their happiness and that is true friendship. I still remember those days we spent together laughing and giggling. Stay in touch with me all the time to keep going with our relation. I request you not forget me during your difficult moments, share with me your happiest moments, remember me during your painful moments, stay in touch to ensure that our relation is a wonderful thing in this world. Thanks for staying in touch with me all these days! You were there in time of my needs. Stay in touch and keep going! Life is full of expectations and I expect you to stay with me! I had a wonderful time with you, stay in touch with me to continue having good time with our most caring persons. I really missed you all these days, and never wanted to miss you in the rest of my life.

Chapter 2 : Amazing mazes: the pleasures of getting lost in the labyrinth | The Spectator

"Victoria: the pleasures of staying in touch" is a book that invites re-reading until one can fully grasp the true jewels it presents, those jewels that have crossed oceans of time and are still here for us to enjoy: the great writers and their letters.

Among its many attractions and allurements – rooms, a boating lake, all the other usual country-house trimmings – Chevening has a magnificent maze, planted by the 4th Earl Stanhope, to a design by his great-grandfather, Philip Stanhope. The maze is a useful symbol for our current crisis. Like a couple of overexcited, lost children on a school trip to Hampton Court, Charlotte Higgins and Henry Eliot bump into each other continually in two new books about mazes, which between them cover every aspect of the history and possible meaning of the maze, from Greek myths to Freud and Borges and back again. Red Thread is a book to admire as much as to enjoy, often unexpected and intense, and occasionally shading into rather self-conscious lyricism: On the path of my life, in the middle of my life, what do I know about where I have been, and where I might go? Everything is the woods, everything is the ocean, everything is the desert. I can see no shape. I am lost; in the middle of my life I am lost. Admittedly, one knows the feeling. Her interest in mazes began on a childhood holiday in Crete, where she was taken on a tour of the palace of Knossos: I remember how much I wanted these narrow rooms and passages to be labyrinthine, to trap and contain me, to be magical, to be a code, to be something that could be unlocked. I wanted to lose myself in them. This was where it began, my longing for the labyrinth. Red Thread follows many such fine threads with tremendous and unembarrassed boldness. Imagine Kenneth Clark at the end of Civilisation banging out a sonnet sequence. The book is also designed and illustrated, by a Frenchman named Quibe – I did say it was odd – to resemble the experience of moving through a maze, with pages upside down and back to front, etc. The most ingenious, informative, inimitable, individual, innovative, insightful, inspiring, instructive, intelligible, intoxicating, intricate guide to the great city that I have ever seen. You get the idea: Amongst the clouds there is a bird, too distant to make out clearly. Its flight is clumsy as it approaches, its tattered wings barely holding the thin air. A man crawls free of the wreckage. He has flown more than 1, miles with arms strapped to artificial wings. Eliot then settles into a rhythm and pace entirely of his own invention, which roughly consists of one or two pages of maze factoids, followed by retellings of the myth of the Minotaur. Suffice it to say that Eliot does eventually find this elusive figure, but things do not go entirely according to plan. It turns out that Bright, who did much to develop the practice and mathematics of contemporary maze-making, has come to loathe mazes and all they stand for. There have of course been many books about mazes before. Mazes always seem to attract oddballs. Jeremy Hunt should beware:
