The Salzburg Connection is based on a novel by Helen MacInnes, and is a rather unoriginal spy thriller with the usual ingredients that characterise practically all early '70s movies within the genre: a convoluted plot, double-crosses, triple-crosses, characters with secrets, and attractive European settings.

Spyros Skouras, then manager of the Fox West Coast Theaters, the studios biggest star, Will Rogers, died in a plane crash weeks after the merger. Its leading female star, Janet Gaynor, was fading in popularity and promising leading men James Dunn, at first, it was expected that the new company was originally to be called Foxth Century, even though 20th Century was the senior partner in the merger. However, 20th Century brought more to the bargaining table besides Schenck and Zanuck, the new company, 20th Century-Fox Film Corporation, began trading on May 31., the hyphen was dropped in The company established a training school. The contracts included an option for renewal for as long as seven years. For many years, 20th Century Fox claimed to have founded in For instance, it marked as its 30th anniversary, however, in recent years it has claimed the merger as its founding, even though most film historians agree it was founded in The companys films retained the 20th Century Pictures searchlight logo on their credits as well as its opening fanfare. Also on the Fox payroll he found two players who he built up into the studios leading assets, Alice Faye and seven-year-old Shirley Temple, favoring popular biographies and musicals, Zanuck built Fox back to profitability. Thanks to record attendance during World War II, Fox overtook RKO, while Zanuck went off for eighteen months war service, junior partner William Goetz kept profits high by going for light entertainment. The studiosâ€”indeed the industrysâ€”biggest star was creamy blonde Betty Grable, in , Spyros Skouras succeeded Kent as president of the studio. Together with Zanuck, who returned in , they intended to make Foxs output more serious-minded. Fox also specialized in adaptations of best-selling books such as Ben Ames Williams Leave Her to Heaven, starring Gene Tierney and they also made the film version of South Pacific 2. Central Intelligence Agency â€” As one of the principal members of the U. Though it is not the only U. In , The Washington Post reported that in fiscal year , the CIA has increasingly expanded its roles, including covert paramilitary operations. One of its largest divisions, the Information Operations Center, has shifted focus from counter-terrorism to offensive cyber-operations, when the CIA was created, its purpose was to create a clearinghouse for foreign policy intelligence and analysis. The Executive Director is in charge of the day to day operation of the CIA, each branch of the military service has its own Director. The Directorate has four regional groups, six groups for transnational issues. The Directorate of Operations is responsible for collecting intelligence. The name reflects its role as the coordinator of intelligence activities between other elements of the wider U. This Directorate was created in an attempt to end years of rivalry over influence, philosophy, in spite of this, the Department of Defense recently organized its own global clandestine intelligence service, the Defense Clandestine Service, under the Defense Intelligence Agency. This Directorate is known to be organized by regions and issues. For example, the development of the U-2 high-altitude reconnaissance aircraft was done in cooperation with the United States Air Force, the U-2s original mission was clandestine imagery intelligence over denied areas such as the Soviet Union. It was subsequently provided with signals intelligence and measurement and signature intelligence capabilities, subsequently, NPIC was transferred to the National Geospatial-Intelligence Agency 3. Thriller film â€” Thriller film, also known as suspense film or suspense thriller, is a film genre that falls under the general thriller genre. The thriller films key characteristics are excitement and suspense, the suspense element, found in most films plots, is particularly exploited by the filmmaker in this genre. Tension is created by delaying what the audience sees as inevitable, a strict definition of the thriller film is that the films overarching goal is to build tension in audiences as the film approaches its climax. Tension is built through situations that are menacing or where escape seems impossible, Life is typically threatened in thriller film, such as when the protagonist does not realize entering a dangerous situation. Thriller films characters conflict with other or with an outside force. Thriller films are typically hybridized with other genres, there exist adventure thrillers, science fiction thrillers, Western thrillers, Thriller films also share a close relationship with horror films, both eliciting tension. In plots about crime, thriller films focus less on the criminal or the detective, common themes include terrorism, political conspiracy, pursuit, or romantic triangles leading to murder. Alfred Hitchcocks first thriller was his silent film, The Lodger. In the s, Hitchcock added technicolor to his thrillers, now with exotic locales and he reached the zenith of his career with a succession of classic films such as, Strangers on a Train, Dial M For Murder with Ray Milland, Rear Window and Vertigo. After Hitchcocks classic films of the s, he produced Psycho about a lonely, mother-fixated motel owner, J. A famous thriller at the time of its release was Wait Until Dark by director Terence Young, John Boormans Deliverance followed the perilous fate of four Southern businessmen during a weekends trip. In Francis Ford Coppolas The Conversation, a bugging-device expert systematically uncovered a covert murder while he himself was being spied upon, Peter Hyams science fiction thriller Capricorn One proposed a government conspiracy to fake the first mission to Mars. Panavision is an American motion picture equipment company specializing in cameras and lenses, based in Woodland Hills, California. The company introduced its first products in 1954, originally a provider of CinemaScope accessories, the companys line of anamorphic widescreen lenses soon became the industry leader. In 1962, Panavision helped revolutionize filmmaking with the lightweight Panaflex 35 mm movie camera, the company has introduced other groundbreaking cameras such as the Millennium XL and the digital video Genesis. Panavision operates exclusively as a rental facility—the company owns its entire inventory, Robert Gottschalk founded Panavision in late 1954, in partnership with Richard Moore, Meredith Nicholson, Harry Eller, Walter Wallin, and William Mann, the company was formally incorporated in 1955. Panavision was established principally for the manufacture of anamorphic lenses to meet the growing demands of theaters showing CinemaScope films. The technology was created during World War I to increase the field of view on tank periscopes, after it was unsqueezed by a complementary anamorphic optical element, the tank operator could see double the horizontal field of view without significant distortion. Gottschalk and Moore bought some of these lenses from C. Goerz, as widescreen filmmaking became popular, Gottschalk saw an opportunity to provide anamorphic lenses to the film industry—first for projectors, and then for cameras. Nicholson, a friend of Moore, started working as a cameraman on early tests of anamorphic photography, in the s, the motion picture industry was threatened by the advent of television—TV kept moviegoers at home, reducing box office revenues. Film studios sought to lure audiences to theaters with attractions that television could not provide and these included a revival of color films, three-dimensional films, stereophonic sound, and widescreen movies. Cinerama was one of the first widescreen movie processes of the era, in its initial conception, the cumbersome system required three cameras for shooting and three synchronized projectors to display a picture on one wide, curved screen. Along with the logistical and financial challenges of tripling equipment usage and cost, by the time the first CinemaScope movie—The Robe—was announced for production, Gottschalk, Moore and Nicholson had a demo reel of work with their anamorphic underwater system. The result was the system, designed by Wallin, used in the Panatar lens, the patent for the system was filed on August 11, 1955. The Super Panatar was a box that attached to the existing projection lens with a special bracket. Its variable prismatic system allowed a range of formats to be shown from the same projector with a simple adjustment of the lens. Panavision improved on the Super Panatar with the Ultra Panatar, a design that could be screwed directly to the front of the projection lens. TCM is headquartered at the Techwood Campus in Atlanta, Georgias Midtown business district, historically, the channels programming consisted mainly of featured classic theatrically released feature films from the Turner Entertainment film library—which comprises films from Warner Bros. In 1984, eight years before the launch of Turner Classic Movies, concerns over Turner Entertainments corporate debt load resulted in Turner selling the studio that October back to Kirk Kerkorian, from whom Turner had purchased the studio less than a year before. The film library of Turner Entertainment would serve as the form of programming for TCM upon the networks launch. Turner Classic Movies debuted on April 14, 1984, at 6,00 p. Eastern Time, the date and time were chosen for their historical significance as the exact centennial anniversary of the first public movie showing in New York City. The first movie broadcast on TCM was the film Gone with the Wind, at the time of its launch, TCM was available to approximately one million cable television subscribers. AMC had broadened its content to feature colorized and more recent films by 1984. In the early 90s AMC abandoned its format, leaving TCM as the only movie-oriented cable channel to devote its programming entirely to classic films without commercial interruption. The networks programming season runs from February until the following March of each year when a retrospective of Oscar-winning and Oscar-nominated movies is shown, called 31 Days of Oscar. Turner Classic Movies presents many of its features in their original aspect ratio whenever possible – widescreen films broadcast on TCM are letterboxed on the standard definition feed. TCM also regularly presents widescreen presentations of films not available in the format on any video release.

6. Anna Karina – Anna Karina is a Danish-French film actress, director and screenwriter who has spent most of her working life in France. With A Woman Is a Woman, Karina won the Best Actress award at the Berlin Film Festival, Karina's mother was a dress shop owner and her father was a ship's captain who left the family a year after she was born. She lived with her grandparents for three years, until she was four. She spent the four years in foster care when she returned to live with her mother. She has described her childhood as terribly wanting to be loved and she began her career in Denmark, where she sang in cabarets and worked as a model playing in commercials. At age 14, she appeared in a Danish short film by Ib Schmedes and she studied dance and painting in Denmark and for a while made a living selling her paintings. In , after a row with her mother, she hitchhiked to Paris, Karina was 17 when she arrived in Paris – poor and unable to speak French. Living on the streets, she got a break while sitting at the cafe Les Deux Magots and she was approached by a woman from an advertisement agency who asked her to do some photos. She became a fashion model, meeting Pierre Cardin and Coco Chanel. He was casting his debut film, Breathless. He offered her a part in the film, but she refused when he mentioned that there would be a nude scene. When Godard questioned her refusal, mentioning the supposed nudity in the Palmolive ads, she is said to have replied, I was wearing a bathing suit in those ads – the soapsuds went up to my neck. It was in mind that I was undressed. In the end, the character Godard reserved for Karina did not appear in the film, the next year, however, Godard offered her a role in Le Petit Soldat. Karina, who was still under 21, had to persuade her mother to sign the contract for her.

7. It features actual footage captured during the race held the previous June, released in June and given a G rating, the film was a flop at the box office in the United States. He has a flashback of Belgetti losing control of his Ferrari, like many others, Lisa appears to feel Delaney was responsible, at least in part, for the accident. At the race she is understandably downcast while working through her emotions, in an awkward scene, Delaney looks for a place to sit in the crowded track commissary, only to ask Lisa if he may join her. There is obvious tension between them, but also respect and a hint of mutual attraction, after 13 hours of racing, Erich Stahler spins his Ferrari at Indianapolis Corner, causing teammate Claude Aurac to veer off the track in a major accident. Dodging the flames of Aurac's car, Delaney avoids a car but collides with the crash barrier and goes off the track. Both survive, but Aurac's injuries are extensive and he is medevaced to a hospital by helicopter, Lisa appears at the track clinic where Delaney is briefly treated. She is distraught at his near crash, which stirs up emotions from Piero's passing she had been seeking to put in the past, Delaney consoles her and rescues her from a horde of reporters. After he puts her in a car, a journalist asks Delaney whether his Porsche driver Johann Ritter senses that his wife, Anna, would like for him to quit racing and he suggests it, thinking she will be overjoyed. She demurs and says she would like it if he likes it. He chides her a bit about not being entirely honest, later the decision is taken out of his hands when team manager David Townsend replaces him for not being quick enough on the track. Anna tries to him, reminding him that he was planning to quit anyway. Lisa goes to Delaney's trailer to talk with him, after his brush with death she is even more drawn to him and despairs that he may meet the same fate as her husband, but Delaney finds the thrill too addictive to quit. Townsend enters and asks him to take over driving Ritter's car, not to win the race, after a moment's unspoken communion with Lisa, he follows Townsend. In the closing minutes of the race the two Porsches and their rival Ferraris vie for the win, with Delaney in the 21 car and teammate Larry Wilson in The Ferrari leading the race due to a flat tire, leaving Wilson in the lead and only Delaney's archrival, Stahler. The faster pair quickly catch Wilson, Delaney passes Stahler for second place.

8. Katzin and based on the novel Deathwatch by Robb White. He hires a college student currently working as a filling station attendant named Ben. Ben is studying to be a geologist, so therefore he knows the desert very well.

Chapter 2 : www.nxgvision.com: Customer reviews: The Salzburg Connection

The Salzburg Connection is a American thriller film directed by Lee H. Katzin, starring Barry Newman and Anna Karina. It is based on a novel by Helen MacInnes. It was filmed in DeLuxe Color and Panavision.

Chapter 3 : Meditation Master Sharon Salzberg On Real Love | Rich Roll

I read MacInnes' first novel Above Suspicion a couple of years ago, and thought the story was pretty good but the writing could be clunky on occasion. One thing I can say for The Salzburg Connection is that by this point in MacInnes' career, nearly twenty years later, that issue had smoothed itself out.
