Brian Lewis, Editor-in-Chief Judge: Lewis, Senior Editor Poetry Judge: There are no age or genre restrictions for this contest, and content guidelines are similar to our standard submission guidelines , including what we are not accepting. Contest One awards prizes for poetry and prose according to our contest judging criteria. Prose includes both fiction and creative nonfiction, but we have not divided the category further because we believe that well-written creative nonfiction should tell a story so well that the result is indistinguishable from fiction. Prose must be less than 12, words. Poetry includes all styles, meters, and rhyme schemes, or may be free-form. Poetry must be less than lines. This is a limit, not a challenge; we are looking for excellent writing and storytelling, not length. This is a limit, not a challenge; we are looking for evocative imagery that paints a small story in a poem. A haiku or tanka has equal chance against a sonnet or epic. Only previously unpublished works will be considered. You may enter a previously-written piece if you feel that it satisfies the prompt for this contest. There are no age limits for this contest other than legal restrictions imposed by your local jurisdiction. A Creative Anthology staff, contest judges, and their immediate families are not eligible. You may enter multiple pieces in this contest, and you may enter both poetry and prose, but each entrant can win at most one prize, no matter how many entries were made. Contest entry fees are non-refundable. All proceeds after prizes are awarded will be applied toward publication costs of Spark: Your name and contact information will be attached to the entry form. Judges will be unable to provide feedback on specific pieces. This prize was selected by Spark as a tool we admire and feel would be useful to contest winners, as it has been to us. However, we were able to purchase these subscriptions at a discount.
