Instead, strike it with the bottom of your fist, as if your hand were a gavel. Clarinetist Clarinetists in orchestras often need to swap between a clarinet in the key of B-flat and one in the key of A right in the middle of a piece— with only about two seconds to spare. Worse, clarinets are black, clarinet stands are black, and this maneuver is usually done in the darkness of a concert hall. And to help aim for the clarinet stand, some paint theirs with glow-in-the-dark paint. Desktop Support When desktop support technicians resolve a ticket, they are usually required to document the cause and solution to the problem. Graphic Designer If you have a client who is unable to approve a proposed design without putting her stamp on it, just put an obvious error in the proposal: Jeweler When setting a semiprecious gem, set a tiny piece of silver or gold foil behind it to make it sparkle. Also, because most stones are pretty irregular being stones and all , fill the base of the setting with sawdust so the stone will set evenly. Juggler With any routine under seven minutes which is almost all of them , you only really need one thing: And there are only two things you really need to know about a great closer. First, it needs to be impressive. Secondly, you should intentionally blow your closer on the first two tries. Landscape Architect You will often have to create a large presentation for clients, and will spend hours coloring in landscape illustrations with markers. Lounge Pianist Never agree to Christmas sing-alongs if there is alcohol involved. Now, put a pillowcase over her neck, rumped up. Once the pillowcase has covered the breasts, leave it behind and continue with only the sheet until her abdomen is exposed. Tuck in pillowcase and sheet, and voila! Mechanic If you have to change a light bulb where the glass is broken, you can press a potato into the metal base to unscrew the remains of the bulb from the fixture. Nurse Patients will occasionally pretend to be unconscious. A surefire way to find them out is to pick up their hand, hold it above their face, and let go. This is because it involves about 10 times more paperwork to announce someone dead right in situ than it does to say they expired in the ambulance on the way to the hospital. Piano Salesman If you see a potential customer eyeing a piano, estimate their age and calculate what year it was when they were 18 years old. With a lot of preparation and a little luck, you might play the exact song they were listening to when they lost their virginity, got married, or drove their first car. The emotional resonance will overcome sales resistance and even open their wallets to a more expensive piano. You can pick up a cheap accordion at a thrift store and simply make stuff up on the street corner. So, when exchanging rings, tell couples to only slide the ring up to the first knuckle and let the other person push it up the rest of the way. More by Matthew Baldwin.
