It was a beautiful sunny winter day and the view of the Catalinas from the dining room added to the delightful ambiance. As an aside, having dined on their patio, the view is even better from there. Upon entering, the first thing I noticed was the recently enlarged and re-designed space. Another delight is the colorful original Mexican carved tables and chairs. Each table has its own theme. However, some patrons find the chairs hard and uncomfortable. Seat cushions would help. The comparison had begun. Unfortunately, the first batch of chips was not fresh. We hailed our server. Paige explained the problem and asked for fresh chips. Server-lady gave her a disapproving glance, but shortly a young fellow brought the fresh chips we had expected. Then it was time to order drinks and our main dishes. Paige and I again ordered margaritas with tequila the lesson learned at El Charro. To no surprise, it was lunchtime and the place was very busy. Nevertheless, our drinks arrived quickly. That should have raised a red flag. Margaritas If these margaritas were made from , neither of us could tell. What was immediately apparent was that our margaritas were too sweet and syrupy. I assume, but do not know, our margaritas came from a pre-mix anyone can buy at the store. Guacamole We asked for an order of guacamole, which came in a few minutes. The boyz spread it on their handmade, fresh-from-the-tortilleria tortillas and declared the combination excellent. Moreover, after El Charro, the salsa was a bit disappointing. Huevos Rancheros Mexican Dishes Our meals came. Typical high-quality Tucson-type Mexican dishes: I had their huevos rancheros. As good or better than at any other Mexican restaurant in town that I have patronized. All of our dishes were served with frijoles, rice, and choice of corn or flour tortillas. It was a very pleasant meal. The screeching and clanking against the tile floor lasted about a minute and was both loud and annoying. Way to spoil our happy mood, muchachos. Generally, we all agreed that the food ranged from good to excellent, even though the first order of chips and the margaritas were a disappointment. Perhaps their fame had had a detrimental effect. I counted the votes. El Charro won hands down.
