One cannot help but pay close attention to this project. One cannot help but cheer on this project. One cannot help but look forward to this succeeding. Can game designers be accepted by the world as storytellers in [other mediums] as well? We have the experience and the know-how and now we just need the support! We will be coordinating with our 3rd parties to ensure both quality of production and timely shipments. All that said, unforeseen issues can occur and while we will provide updates on our various productions as they get underway, the hope is for the grace and patience of our backers that should accompany any artistic endeavor. We are professionals with the resumes to back up our claims. We have each put out quality works that have been well reviewed by critics and fans alike. This cost will not go up! Because of our experience and knowledge of the industry, our goal is the honest amount of what this project will require. We have been doing this for a while and we know what we can do with a given amount of funding for an anime production! Costs include hiring Kinema Citrus for the animation, Japanese voice actors, English subtitles, fees, backer rewards! We want to be able to work on something that sparks our passion and have the end result be something we and you can be proud of. We are coming to Kickstarter because we believe in the benefits it can offer over our traditional avenues of funding and it gives our fans the unique opportunity to be involved and take part of something special. In Japan, it is very difficult to obtain independent funding since the anime industry heavily relies on what is known as "seisaku iinkai" or "production committees. One company could take on animation, another music, another advertising, another distribution, and so on. It can also drive down the costs of production due to companies willing to take an initial loss with the hopes of turning a profit over the course of several years as the anime and any licensing deals run their course music, toys, manga, etc. This can often lead to projects stalled or mired in bureaucracy, indecision, and conflicts of interest. Production committees also generally require intellectual property buyouts in which the creatives involved essentially sacrifice all rights to their work just so they can see their dreams come to fruition in any form at all. Kickstarter will allow our artists to retain their rights and control as well as maintain their passion and investment for the lifetime of the series and any spin-offs. We also have less "cooks in the kitchen," so to speak, so that creative direction will be decisive. No marketing or advertising based creative decisions or delays here! [NEWS] "UNDER THE DOG", starts second round of crowdfunding with new film project! (20th October) "UNDER THE DOG", starts second round of crowdfunding with new film project!

Asami Seto Flowers No. She is the protagonist of Under the Dog. As a member of the Flowers, she is an expert in the methods of infiltration and assassination. Due to her exceptional combat skills, she is widely known and feared among military organizations worldwide. Fearing that Hana may fail her mission, the Flowers deploy Anthea into a pod to capture the target and bring Shunichi to the Flowers. As Anthea reaches the roof, she shoots at the Pandora and gets close trying to break its shield. As it fails, the Pandora sends out his shield and knocks her against a wall. As she begins to regenerate her skin, she grabs her pistol and runs inside her pod to take cover from an incoming missile. Anthea sees that Shunichi is a Pandora, says "Hana, we were wrong again", and shoots Shunichi, thus ending the mission. She embarks on a secret mission while posing as a transfer student at a public school on Enoshima Island. While undercover, she locates her target named Shunichi Nanase and tries to protect him from a Pandora, a creature that masquerades as a human, and the US military task force that wants to capture the Pandora by any means necessary. Struggling to recover from a previous mission, she is at risk of turning into a Pandora. Hana has the ability to augment her senses, like eyesight and hearing, at will. While she uses her ability, her eyes turn green, resembling a Pandora. As the Pandora set eyes on Shunichi, it chases after him. As Hana needs time to heal from her wounds from battle, she rests but discovers that Shunichi is missing when she awakens and so searches for him. Hana has a shoot out with the task force, but they deploy missiles and she is gravely injured in the blast. Knowing that Hana would not survive, Anthea shoots Hana through the heart, killing her. Shunichi is quiet and withdrawn in class, yet Hana appears to have taken a special interest in him. As the US military task force closes onto the school, they find out that the Flowers are here. A Pandora arrives to the school and rips apart the soldiers. Protected with a shield that deflects bullets, nothing could stop it once the Pandora set its eyes on Shunichi. While escaping from the soldiers and Pandora, Shunichi tells Hana about his father running away from home, leaving his mother and him. As Hana needs time to recuperate, she falls asleep and Shunichi went to look for medical supplies to tend her wounds, but was caught by the task force. As Shunichi is taken away on a helicopter, the Pandora attacks every helicopter and takes Shunichi into his hand. As the Pandora failed to kill Anthea, it runs towards Shunichi. After the missile hits the school, the Pandora is shielding Shunichi. The Pandora rises and Shunichi has stabbed the Pandora with his pandora blade-like hand. As the Pandora turns into its human form, Shunichi recognizes it as his dad. All along, escaped "Research Subject P" was Shunichi. Shunichi was first cleared as "White", meaning he had no detection of being a Pandora, but later turned to "Black"; the Flowers have never seen this happen. Haruka Takahashi Flowers No. She has been a member of the Flowers since her early teens. Her expertise is in intelligence gathering, and she often teams up with Estella. When departing, Sayuri in the backseat of the car seems in the car to be holding the head of Hanas brother - it can be speculated that this is what for Hana says thank you to Anthea. Naomi Ohzora Flowers No. Estella joined the Flowers at the age of 8, much earlier than any of the other members. She is an excellent sniper and often teams up with Sayuri. While dressed up as a school girl, Estella keeps her sniper rifle setup in a violin case. As Hana is securing her target, Estella shoots down task force snipers and soldiers ready to kill Hana. He once saved Anthea from a slave trade organization while he was on a secret mission in Scandinavia. His codename is No. Amagata looks into why Shunichi was cleared as "White", then turned into a Pandora, which is defined as "Black". Development[edit] The story for Under the Dog was initially conceived between and , with a script treatment completed in The project itself eventually was described as an entry point or "Episode 0" to introduce the world and characters. Its central theme was struggling for freedom, represented on multiple levels. Its tagline, "Our enemy is the light of humanity", represents the story element of people intended to be saviors being branded as enemies, a recurring motif in the anime that inspired it. Their stated reason was that the current anime market did not allow for the amount of creative control they desired, as the majority of anime production was dictated by a committee, which would have been unwilling to take on Under the Dog as it did not target the core otaku audience. The team also wanted to reach out to an international audience, making Kickstarter a viable funding option. At that time, the team were in talks with Netflix and Crunchyroll to distribute the anime worldwide. Ando and Ishii remained their respective roles. To help with this, a new group called Mentat Studios LLC was formed to manage the publicity so the team could focus on animation.
