November 2, 3: The most preferred cadre has to be given rank 1, the second most preferred cadre should be given rank 2 and so on. The other services are central services. The Indian Forest Service Exam is held separately. The preference ranking is very important and should not be taken lightly. If a candidate joins the IAS or IPS, it is this cadre ranking which will be used to assign the cadre to the candidate. The cadre is allocated on the basis of the ranks. The higher the rank, the greater then probability that the candidate would get the top preference. Many candidates fill in this order randomly and then suffer late as they do not get the desired cadre of their choice. Thus, some tips are given below to guide candidates in making a proper preference ranking. As stated in the UPSC notification only if a candidate gives first preference to home cadre will home cadre be considered. Otherwise, the home cadre will not be given to the candidate. Thus, candidates should think about whether or not they want to get their home cadre and put it as first preference accordingly. Candidates should consider putting neighbouring cadres in their top preferences if proximity to home is a priority. Rank all cadres thoughtfully: Many candidates fill in the top four-five cadres after much contemplation. However, they randomly rank the remaining cadres. Candidates should not make this mistake. So candidates should thoughtfully rank at least top 15 cadres. During their probation, they are required to pass an exam on the language of their cadre. Candidates should consider this factor while putting in the ranks. The last date for submitting the Detailed Application Form online is The candidates are also required to print the submitted form, sign it and attach a passport photograph. UPSC should receive the printed form by 5:
