

Are you sure you want to remove The wind in the willows from your list? v. 2. Mr. Toad / translation by Joe Johnson: v. 3. The gates of dawn: v. 4. Panic at Toad.

And they do, in a far more interesting manner than I expected. And in spite of its contextâ€”or maybe even because of itâ€”this book is enjoyable. Pyg and his creepy, creepy doll-people. Quitely too does a good job, although I get the feeling that he was rushed. Not because the art suffers from a lack of qualityâ€”or the fact that it actually came out on time, rimshotâ€”but because his distinctive layouts are almost completely absent. The only stereotypically Quitely page in the whole bookâ€”aside from the integrated sound effects, which I lovedâ€”is the shot of Wayne Tower with the cutaway beneath. In any case, it works and it works well, because Batman and Robin 1 is everything a Batman comic oughtta be: Action-packed, mysterious, and most of all, fun. And I thought it was great. Captain Britain and MI Annual 1: And with good reason: The Best of Duke: The stories look great up until the last issue or shortly before , then they all go to hell. From 50, the penultimate issue in the trade: Crisp lines, clean colors. Then in 80, the last issue of the trade, it all goes to hell: Age of the Sentry: Getting back to the subject of comics with my name in them, we have Age of the Sentry, which hits the trifecta by printing a pullquote on the back cover, reprinting the cover on which the pullquote originally appeared, and listing me as an official member of the Merry Marvel Marching Society on the last page. So why all the attention? Because I love this comic book. As always, any questions or concerns can be left in the comments section below, so feel free to discuss the gorgeous art of Exiles, the high-concept hilarity of Werewolves on the Moon vs. Vampires or the dread and apprehension that always accompanies a new issue of Anita Blake. One last thing before I go, though: You know that X-Men trade that came out this week? So, you know, you might want that.

Share Cyril Proudbottom Quotes: Lord love a duck, yes! Then how did he get the motorcar? The only way a gentlemen gets anything: Toad summons a witness: Winky the barman who had taken possession of Toad Hall in exchange for the car] Mr. Winky, do you recall an incident that took place in your establishment, about August the 12th, that I was a party to? That I do, sir. Well, then, just tell the court what actually happened. Toad is surrounded by the guards] Cyril Proudbottom: What have I been missing. I want you fellows to meet my noble steed, Cyril. A bit of a trotter, a bit of a rotter. How do you do, how do you do, how do you DO? The weasels gave him the red motorcar, and he gave the weasels Toad Hall. The witness may testify in his own words. It was big, it was red, it was beautiful: Hee, a bit of alright; Toady was transfixed with, uh, rapture. You could tell it was love at first sight. The motor pulled up to a tavern wherein was located a bar and we watched while some tough-looking weasels got out of that lovely red car. Now weasels, I know, are deceitful and not to be trusted at all And he said, "Cheerio, tavern-keeper! Browse more character quotes from Share.
