Wyckoff There are those who think they are studying the market- what all they are doing is studying what someone has said about the market. Wyckoff Who was Richard D. Wyckoff and why is he important to all of us. Richard Demille Wyckoff November 2, 1873 – March 19, 1942, was a stock market authority, founder and onetime editor of the Magazine of Wall Street founding it in 1903, and editor of Stock Market Technique. Continuing as a trader and educator in the stock, commodity and bond markets throughout the early 1900s, Wyckoff was curious about the logic behind market action. Through conversations, interviews and research of the successful traders of his time, Wyckoff augmented and documented the methodology he traded and taught. Wyckoff worked with and studied them all, himself, Jesse Livermore, E. Keene, Otto Kahn, J. Morgan, and many other large operators of the day. He analyzed these market operators and their operations, and determined where risk and reward were optimal for trading. He emphasized the placement of stop-losses at all times, the importance of controlling the risk of any particular trade, and he demonstrated techniques used to campaign within the large trend bullish and bearish. Wyckoff married three times: first to Shear, and third to Alma Weiss. Wyckoff charged in that his second wife, Cecelia G. Wyckoff to be of great interest and value. In 1937, after a long and distinguished career, Mr. Wyckoff wrote a unique course on how to invest and trade in securities and concurrently he founded a teaching organization to help people to learn to use his successful methods. That course is the Richard D. Wyckoff Course. How was Richard D. At one time, as market advisor, he commanded one of the largest individual followings in the history of Wall Street. Wyckoff was known as one of the most accomplished tape readers of his day. Wyckoff carved out for himself a career and a fortune. Wyckoff was a pioneer in the study of the tape, and of the technicalities of the market itself. Not the least interesting of these personalities is that of Wyckoff himself. Wyckoff, as nearly everybody must know, is founder of the Magazine of Wall Street and edited it until 1937. As a broker, speculator, editor and financial advisor, he has been intimately acquainted with famous players in that greatest of games. Wyckoff was always a serious student of the market. But he was essentially a speculator rather than a buyer for the long pull. Unlike most speculators, however, he made a fortune and a success. No one can describe that spectacle with more authority than Mr. Wyckoff who went through every stage of the Street from a boy employed in a brokerage house, to a successful speculator, a giant in the battle, and as editor of The Magazine of Wall Street. In his younger days he made a close study of the methods used by the leaders in the market. Wyckoff is a name familiar in itself. His span of experience in things financial has been important and varied. He started away back in 1891 as a cog in the big stock market machine and had an ambition to learn and to tell others what made it go around. This was the life objective of Richard D. It is a long road which stretches between that first Wall Street job and his later successes, culminating in the founding and ownership of The Magazine of Wall Street. Such a career could not fail to bring him into contact with some of the outstanding figures of the times. He has known intimately for two score years the greatest of our national games, high finance. Wyckoff has been less perhaps an operator in a sensational way than a student of finance. Financial men will remember him as editor of The Magazine of Wall Street, a periodical for which he had been chiefly responsible for from its beginning, more than twenty years ago, to the time of his retirement in 1937. Wyckoff does not want the hard bought experience of forty years to lie idle. Therefore, he is endeavoring to pass on some of his accumulated wisdom to others. April issue of.
