Wayside School Boxed Set: Wayside School Gets a Little Stranger, Wayside School is Falling Down, Sideways Stories from Wayside School Louis Sachar out of 5 stars

While a student at University of California, Berkeley , author Louis Sachar began working at an elementary school to earn college credit. It became my favorite college class, and a life changing experience. I have to make up what I put in my books. Jewls, a nice teacher with occasionally impractical teaching methods. She is the replacement for the old teacher, Mrs. Gorf, who was an evil teacher who could wiggle her ears and stick out her tongue to turn the students into apples. The third book introduces her son, Mr. Gorf, who could steal voices through a third nostril, alongside Mrs. Wendy Nogard, who could read thoughts with a third ear on the top of her head. The thirtieth story has had thirty students taught throughout the course of the books, such as Todd, a student who Mrs. Jewls sends home on the kindergarten bus after slight misdemeanors; Maurecia, a sweet and sensitive girl who loves ice cream; Dana, a girl with glasses who has a tendency to be over-emotional; and Myron, a trustworthy and loyal student who was class president for one day. There are also the Three Eric's, consisting of Eric Fry, the most athletic Eric who is often called "Butterfingers" since the other Eric's are inathletic; Eric Bacon, the skinniest Eric who is often called "Fatso" since the other Eric's are fat; and Eric Ovens, the nicest Eric who is usually called "Crabapple" since the other Eric's are typically pretty negative. Sharie is a girl who wears a large coat and frequently falls asleep in class, but is respected since Mrs. Also in the books are Allison, a girl who typically tries to assert dominance, even over her friends; D. Three new students were introduced throughout the course of the series, the first being Sammy, who first appeared in Sideways Stories from Wayside School , who was revealed to be a dead rat bundled in raincoats by the end of the chapter. The third and final was Benjamin Nushmutt, introduced in Wayside School is Falling Down , being a boy who everyone believed was named Mark Miller up until the twenty-ninth chapter of the book. Pepperadder, who only appears in the math spin-offs, being a person who is often pranked by Miss Mush because he is shorter than her. Pickell is the school counselor, who uses hypnosis on the students to cure their ailments, but also add strange side-effects. She and her students supposedly do not exist either. There is also Miss Worm, the teacher of the honors class story who is annoyed by Mrs. A few one-off characters include Mrs. Waloosh, the eccentric dance teacher at the school; Mrs. Franklin, a substitute from the second book that believed all the students were named Benjamin; Mrs. Day, the school secretary; and David, Mr. A few more characters include Hobo Bob, a hobo who hates socks brought in by Sharie for show-and-tell; Xavier Dalton, a man who made Ms. Nogard bitter and hateful after being disgusted by her third ear; Mr. Finch, a man who saved up his life savings to start an ice cream company; and the numerous cows, one of which ended up on the nineteenth story, that came to the school leading to it being shut down for days. Story conventions[edit] In Sideways Arithmetic From Wayside School , it is revealed the characters add, subtract, and multiply words. The children at Wayside School have no concept of adding numbers until Mrs. If a student does something wrong once, Mrs. If a student does something wrong a second time, Mrs. If a student does something wrong a third time, Mrs. Despite only needing three strikes, Mrs. Jewls resorts to also adding a triangle when Sammy was disruptive. Despite being a good student, Todd is sent home every day on the kindergarten bus as a result of him always unfairly getting in trouble each day. Another time, when it looks like Joy was going to be sent home early, Todd thinks he is going to have company, but Joy ends up making up for her crime by kissing Jason on the nose so that he would come unstuck from the gum she put on his seat. Jewls even sends herself home early for temporarily turning evil. After the principal ran into his office door and spilled coffee over his clothes, he said that the word "door" was a bad word. Anyone who said "door" would get in trouble. So he introduced the word "goozack" to replace the word door. Drazil said "door" and the students pointed out that she was to call it "goozack," she immediately said "Mr. In all three books in the Wayside School series, Chapter 19 differs strongly from other chapters. In the third book, Chapter 19 is also based on the non-existent location. In all three books, Chapter 17 has the theme of things being done backwards. In the first book, John reads upside-down. The second book includes a chapter in which the paragraphs are read in reverse order, and the third book has a title which is paradoxical to its plot until the final sentences. In the first book, Chapter 22 is about The Three Erics. In the second book, the 22nd chapter Chapter, 20, 21, and 22 is also about the three Erics. And in the television series, the second half of Episode 22 is called The Three Erics. Other media[edit] In , Nelvana produced an hour-long television special loosely based on the books called Wayside: The special was later spun off into a series titled Wayside , which aired on Nickelodeon and Teletoon from to

Chapter 2 : A Package for Mrs. Jewls | Wayside School Wikia | FANDOM powered by Wikia

Wayside School is Falling Down is a children's novel by American author Louis Sachar, and the second book in his Wayside School series. Like its predecessor, it contains 30 chapters, although some chapters are interconnected in a more narrative form rather than as separate stories, as is the case for its predecessor.

Louis has to carry a heavy package to Mrs. Jewls. This chapter opens with Louis frowning as he looks at the messy schoolyard, covered with pencils and sheets of paper. However, he is soon interrupted by a man with big bushy hair driving a delivery truck. He says he has a package for Mrs. Jewls, and Louis offers to take it, but the deliveryman notes he has to take it to Mrs. Jewls and takes the package. The package is so large, he can hardly see anything, but fortunately, he knows that Mrs. Jewls lives on the thirtieth story. The chapter notes that when Wayside School was built, it was built thirty stories tall, and Mrs. Jewls lives on the thirtieth story, because Wayside School has no elevators. There are also stairs downstairs, to the basement, but no one goes there. There are dead rats living in the basement. The box squished up against his nose, but even then, he can still smell Miss Mush preparing her Mushroom Surprise. He continues up the stairs, as sore as he may be, because he believes the package could be important. He steps up easily from the eighteenth story to the twentieth, because there is no nineteenth story. The book mentions that Miss Zarves teaches the nineteenth story and there is no Miss Zarves. At last, he reaches the thirtieth story and knocks on the door with his head. Mrs. Jewls asks who wants to open the door for Louis, and everyone raises their hands, because they love to be interrupted when they are working. Mrs. Jewls decides that they can hold a spelling bee to open the door, and everyone likes the idea. Most students spell different synonymous words than the ones given, but Mrs. Jewls is fine with that. Meanwhile, Louis feels his arms going numb until John finally opens the door. Louis starts inside, but John wants to shake his hand. Louis briefly shuffles the box to one arm to shake his hand, then quickly grabs it with both again. Louis asks where Mrs. Jewls wants the box, but Mrs. Jewls stands on a nearby chair as she opens up the box, and finds a computer inside. Mrs. Jewls has Louis place the computer on the counter as he falls over, then Mrs. Jewls demonstrates how to use it. She pushes the computer out the window as part of her lesson on gravity, and the class watches it smash against the sidewalk. She thanks Louis, saying they were trying to work with pencils and paper all day, but the computer was a lot faster.

Chapter 3 : Allison | Wayside Wiki | FANDOM powered by Wikia

Wayside School is Falling Down is the second of Louis Sachar's three Wayside School books, and the best of the three. Each of the thirty stories in this novel centers on a st Often when we hear "realistic fiction" we think of heavy, thought-provoking texts.

Like its predecessor, it contains 30 chapters, although some chapters are interconnected in a more narrative form rather than as separate stories, as is the case for its predecessor. The novel revolves around three main storylines: The third and final story-line, told in the final chapter of the book, ends in a cliffhanger. Plot[edit]

1. A Package For Mrs. Louis brings a package containing a computer intended for Mrs. Jewls up to her classroom. A nervous new student named Benjamin Nushmutt joins Mrs. He tries to tell Mrs. Jewls his real name, but he is too shy. Bebe writes nasty notes on her homework about Mrs. Jewls and blames it on her nonexistent younger brother Ray Gunn. He actually is later revealed to be on the nineteenth floor, but there is no nineteenth floor. Next, he disrupts a lesson on dinosaurs with stories about watermelons. In the end, Mrs. Jewls gives up and assigns extra homework, which Mac complains about to Nancy. Another Story About Socks: Sharie brings in a hobo named Bob for show-and-tell. Bob tells a little bit about his life story and expresses a distaste for socks due to once winning a spelling bee without wearing any. When he leaves, the students take this notion to heart right before their weekly spelling test. Finding no other means to reel him back in, Leslie extends Paul her pigtails to save his life. Myron wishes to be free like a wild bird he befriends, whom he names Oddly. He attempts to satisfy this desire by wandering into and getting lost in the school basement. They give Myron an ultimatum: Todd brings a toy dog to class that keeps him out of trouble and can transform into a vicious wolf. In her bid to use that toy to her advantage, Joy misses that last detail and gets her pinkie chomped on. The lunch special for the 18th day in a row is Mushroom Surprise. Ron surprises everyone by ordering just that, which causes him to temporarily fall in love with and even kiss the mouth of the first person he sees: The chapter ends when Mrs. Jewls enters the now-empty cafeteria just as Ron takes another bite. Benjamin tries to tell the class his real name, but his attempts are drowned out by the class during Music day. Each time Benjamin tries to tell Mrs. Jewels, the loudness of the class prevents her from hearing him. Kidswatter, the principal of Wayside, comes to Mrs. Jewels class to report of numerous noise complaints from the classrooms below. Jewels misinterprets this complaint as a request to play even louder. Benjamin finally gets into the music class and decides to continue to use his alias, feeling that "Mark Miller" is a better person than Benjamin Nushmutt. DJ becomes upset when he loses a watch given to him by his great-grandfather. Jason has a bad habit of chewing pencils. Jason has an idea to stop chewing on pencils; his idea was to suck on a tootsie roll pop, so when he went to ask Mrs. Mewls for a Tootsie pop Mrs. Jewls pulls out tape. Jewls solves the problem until further notice by literally taping his mouth shut. Dana then fears having a crush on John. Despite other suggestions, he settles for a potato tattoo on his ankle. The students of Mrs. Gorf at random times on random spots around the playground. After relating his own bad experiences of his old teacher Mrs. Drazil, Louis watches for the former teacher while Deedee hangs from the monkey bars. Everyone feels assured when Mrs. Love And A Dead Rat: Dameon denies being in love with Mrs. To prove the opposite, he takes up a dare to leave a dead rat in her desk. The two reason these dealings and reconcile enough to disgust the rat back to life that it walks out. Jenny comes late to class one day after reluctantly drinking prune juice during breakfast. Upon arriving at class, she only manages to hear the punchline to the silly story. Not understanding the premise leading to the joke, Mrs. Jewels suggests that she reads the story in reverse so she can instead be surprised by the set-up since she knows the ending. The chapter is written in reverse and can be read in proper sequential order when each paragraph is read from the last to first. When the teacher reveals her own name, the students are not sure what to think. It turns out Ms. Franklin has gray hair and glasses and her real first name is Benjamin. After getting knocked down the stairs a short way by Ron and Deedee and her jacket torn, Allison proceeds to class and finds everybody ignoring her, especially when Jason accidentally swallows his pet goldfish. A frustrated Allison leaves the room and finds herself inducted into the classroom of Miss Zarves. Allison soon starts forgetting her own origins while the teacher provides an extremely difficult assignment of writing down numbers from zero to one million and then alphabetizing them. During a two-minute break, Allison meets Mark Miller, who is in a twist of his counterpart in Mrs. Allison continues struggling to remember her origins while other students memorize the dictionary. Following a sharp stabbing pain in her gut and foot, Allison wakes up back at the bottom of the stairs where Ron and Deedee pushed her! She then realizes she might have ended up in a dream or a time warp. They apologize, and all proceed to their homeroom where Jason introduces his goldfish. He suspects the three Erics in Mrs. Rondi grows in her missing front teeth and thinks she no longer looks cute. Rondi then remembers that her new teeth are useful and then ducks when Terrence tries punching her to solve her problem. Another Story About Potatoes: Joe orders some potato salad from Miss Mush. He and John then shape it into Mrs. They triumph over this menace by eating it. Stephen dresses up in a leisure suit for Class Picture Day, contrasting the silly outfits that his classmates and Mrs. He shows the class that if he tightens his tie, he looks more handsome. The kids find it very funny and encourage him to tighten his tie even more, and Stephen does so, which makes him choke the more tighter he pulls his tie, until he pulls his tie so tight that it rips in half. Stephen fears that he no longer looks good, but Mrs. Jewls teaches the class the capital of England, seven plus four, and how to make pickles. A voice in her head tells her to be rotten whenever the students do something wrong, regardless how or what she teaches. After Leslie answers a question wrong, Mrs. Jewls threatens to dump brine on her until Paul intervenes, drenching the teacher instead. As punishment for acting so cranky, Mrs. Jewls sends herself home early on the kindergarten bus. A former pencil maker named Mr. A dance teacher named Mrs. Waloosh teaches all of Mrs. But it turns out, the session of the day is learning how to dance the tango, in which everyone enjoys. When the session ends, the participants end up injured; great at said doing the tango; and speaking in the same accent as the new teacher. Benjamin once more attempts telling the class his real name, but then Mac tells a story about a hippie who lost his ear in a hair-cutting accident. Although Benjamin succeeds, his fear of being weird is laid to rest when the others relate events recent to the book. Jewls even gives him the lunch meant for him that Louis placed on her desk back in Chapter 2. Wayside School Is Falling Down: A brewing storm makes a fire drill go awry when Mrs. She rings her cowbell enough times for the wind to carry the sound far away. Eventually, the school itself is stuffed full of cows, having been attracted to said bell.
