For more than years, the White House has been more than just the home of the Presidents and their families. For two hundred years, the White House has stood as a symbol of the Presidency, the United States government, and the American people. Construction began when the first cornerstone was laid in October of 1792. Although President Washington oversaw the construction of the house, he never lived in it. It was not until 1800, when the White House was nearly completed, that its first residents, President John Adams and his wife, Abigail, moved in. Since that time, each President has made his own changes and additions. It is also the only private residence of a head of state that is open to the public, free of charge. The White House has a unique and fascinating history. It survived a fire at the hands of the British in 1814 during the war of 1812 and another fire in the West Wing in 1946, while Herbert Hoover was President. Throughout much of Harry S. Truman's presidency, the exterior stone walls are those first put in place when the White House was constructed two centuries ago. Presidents can express their individual style in how they decorate some parts of the house and in how they receive the public during their stay. Thomas Jefferson held the first Inaugural open house in 1801. Many of those who attended the swearing-in ceremony at the U. S. Capitol simply followed him home, where he greeted them in the Blue Room. President Jefferson also opened the house for public tours, and it has remained open, except during wartime, ever since. In 1829, a horde of 20,000 Inaugural callers forced President Andrew Jackson to flee to the safety of a hotel while, on the lawn, aides filled washtubs with orange juice and whiskey to lure the mob out of the mud-tracked White House. He held a presidential review of the troops from a flag-draped grandstand built in front of the White House. This procession evolved into the official Inaugural parade we know today. More White House facts: There are also doors, windows, 28 fireplaces, 8 staircases, and 3 elevators. President James Polk was the first President to have his photograph taken. President Theodore Roosevelt was not only the first President to ride in an automobile, but also the first President to travel outside the country when he visited Panama. President Franklin Roosevelt was the first President to ride in an airplane. When Theodore Roosevelt brought his large family to the White House in 1902, he felt that his office and home should be completely separate. Two wings or extensions were added to the first floor.
