Select Long Ancestry England. They were descended from a Norman noble of Preux in Normandy. His son Robert Long took possession of the South Wraxall and Draycot estates and the Long line extended from him down through thirteen generations. The Longs led colorful and influential lives in Tudor times. The line died out in the early 19th century. Later came the Viscount Longs, the descendants of the 18th century banker and politician Richard Godolphin Long. Another Long family held Dunston Hall and were the rectors of St. These Longs built an impressive new manor house of Dunston Hall in But Fortescue Long who inherited the estate was to spend little time there. He suffered from mental problems and lived most of his life in sanitoriums. The 19th century distribution of the Long name showed two main clusters: Early documents showed Longus and Long spellings. But Lang and increasingly Laing dominated as a surname. Long had mainly disappeared by the time of the census in Scotland. The Longs in Ireland got their names from a number of different origins. Some are from Norman, English and Scottish descent. The Norman de Longs arrived in the 12th century with the Anglo-Norman conquest and established themselves in a number of locations. During an outbreak of agrarian violence in , Richard Long, the unpopular landlord at the time, was shot dead while sitting on the toilet. One sept was located in county Armagh. But the greater numbers were to be found in central Cork. He was killed in the subsequent upheavals and his lands were then confiscated. But Long as a name did continue in Cork. Early Long arrivals from England were: Ware Long of this family was thought by his grandson to have been years old when he died in he was in fact probably only in his eighties. Long wrote Genealogy of the Descendants of Ware Long in His descendants later moved onto Pennsylvania, Indiana, and Ohio. And it was from Maryland that the forefathers of Huey Long, the Louisiana populist, originated. His son became a prosperous merchant, trading to the Caribbean, and fought on the American side in the Revolutionary War. It was said that he had seventeen sons, all of whom fought in the Revolutionary War. William, the only one of these sons who has been traced, subsequently married and moved south to Alabama. Included in this number were: It was his grandson Adam, born in , who changed the name to Long. The Story of Philip Long. He and his wife Sarah raised seven children there. Select Long Miscellany If you would like to read more, click on the miscellany page for further stories and accounts: Long was an early 20th century lumber baron from Kansas after whom the town of Longview in Washington was named. Nicknamed "the Kingfish," he was a man noted for his radical populist views. You might want to check out the surnames page on this website. Select Webb Ancestry England. Early Webbs seem to have come from the west country. The byname Alger se Webba appeared in Devon around the year A Webb family from Dorset was to be found in the vicinity of Stratford, Warwickshire by the midth century. They made their home at Bearley, a small village north of Stratford, and became prominent in court circles during Tudor times. Richard Webb emigrated to America in Early Webbs were to be found in Stroud in Gloucestershire, where they were prominent in the cloth industry, and on the Gloucestershire borders with Warwickshire and Oxfordshire. Humphrey Webb, forebear of American emigrants, came from the Oxfordshire side. One family history started with William Webb leaving his native Oxfordshire in to work in a papermill in Redditch, Warwickshire. There was a Webb family in Draycott, Wiltshire in the late 14th century and possibly earlier. Alice Webb, the last of this line, married William Richmond in and their family became known as the Richmond Webbs. There were also Webbs in the towns of Salisbury and Devizes. He built Church House on Crane Street there. Poole was probably another port through which Webbe exported his goods as both his son and grandson did so, while his daughter married a merchant of the town. A relative of his, Philip Webb, went to London, prospered as a lawyer, and secured in through marriage a country estate in Surrey, Milford House. Another Webb line in Wiltshire, found at Oldstock, were noted for their adherence to Catholicism. Kent had early Webbs in the southeast. The Webbs at Frittenden may have come from Stratford. But the Webbes at Sandwich and Canterbury were probably home-grown. Bennet Webbe was mayor of Sandwich in George Webbe, probably a nephew, was a corn merchant in Canterbury. John Webbe was burnt at the stake in Canterbury in because of his Protestant faith. London by that time had many Webbes, including the adventurer Edward Webbe who voyaged to the Levant and later recounted his escapades. The 19th century distribution of the Webb name showed two groupings, one in and around London and including Kent and Essex and a second in the west country, extending north from Wiltshire through Gloucestershire and Warwickshire into Staffordshire. However, during the Irish uprising of , Webb was imprisoned by rebels and died of jail fever. Other Webbs in Ireland arrived at the time of Cromwell or later. Captain Daniel Webb established himself at Maidstown castle in Limerick. Webbs were also to be found in Antrim, Dublin, Tipperary, and elsewhere. Richard Webb came to Boston in and later moved with the Rev. Hooker to found the new town of Hartford, Connecticut. From his line came: Webb, a General in the Revolutionary War. He was aide-de-camp to Washington and wounded in three battles. The family legacy is their Vermont home, now the Shelburne Museum. Christopher Webb, who arrived with his father in , was the Town Clerk in Braintree, Massachusetts. His family had early associations with the Adams family. By the time of the American Revolution private brigantines commanded by Webb sea captains captured English ships and sold the cargo and ships as prizes. The Webb seafaring prowess continued well into the 19th century. Giles Webb from the Stratford Webbs was an early arrival in Virginia, getting there with his father on the Thomas Babe in His descendants ended up in Carroll county. John Webb, born in Pitsylvania county in , had descendants who settled in North Carolina, Tennessee, and Mississippi. Australia and New Zealand. Two Webbs, Robert and Thomas, served as able seamen on the First Fleet to Australia in and their brother James was to follow them on the Scarborough two years later. Robert was one of the first settlers to be granted land. He died, however, in James Webb was an early settler in an area that became known as Brisbane Water. Edmund Webb, the son of a Cornish farmer, came to Australia for his health in He settled in Bathurst, NSW. Thomas Stirrup Webb, the son of a Methodist minister in Staffordshire, was one of the first settlers to come to the northern Wairoa region of New Zealand. He arrived there, a middle-aged man with wife and seven children, in Select Webb Miscellany If you would like to read more, click on the miscellany page for further stories and accounts: Webb was a 19th century American railroad magnate and one of the adornments of the Gilded Age. Captain Matthew Webb was the first recorded person to swim the English Channel in However, eight years later he died in an attempt to swim the Niagara rapids. Harry Webb was the given name of the Heinrich Frei Family Association. Descendants of Heinrich Frei. Select Fry Ancestry England. Thomas le Frye was recorded in the Wiltshire rolls of and the region of north Wiltshire, around Malmesbury, provided some early sightings of the name. They became Quakers there in the midth century before starting a chocolate factory in Bristol in the midth and establishing a family dynasty of Quakers that extended into the 20th century: Cecil Fry sold the chocolate business to their rivals Cadbury in , much to the anger of fellow-members of the family. This business continued into the 19th century with Edmund and Henry Fry. Other Frys from Wiltshire were to be found in sizeable numbers in the villages of Lacock and Castle Combe near Corston. William Fry married Ann Ogborn in Winscombe in The oldest line appears to have been in Membury near Axminster, where the Frys had become masters of Yarty House in The five counties of Gloucestershire, Somerset, Wiltshire, Hampshire and Devon accounted for just about half of all the Frys recorded in the Victorian censuses. Henry Fry from a merchant family in Somerset had been invited to Boyle to set up a local weaving industry. Frys have remained at the house since that time. A later Fry arrival from Somerset into Virginia. Joshua Fry, made more waves. He married into money in and set himself up as a mapmaker, surveyor, and a landowner of an acre plantation along the Hardware river. He was friends with the Washingtons and Jeffersons, later to become famous in American history. His descendants were early settlers in Kentucky. His line was covered in the Rev. Most were of German stock. He and his family are credited with holding the first charter for the land that became Philadelphia and for building what is considered the historical "Old Town" section of that city. Frey was a Swiss Mennonite family name and more Freys began arriving in the early 18th century because of the religious tolerance that William Penn afforded. Johannes Frey, for instance, came with his family in and settled first in Berks county, Pennsylvania and later in Burke county, North Carolina. Some of these Freys became Amish Mennonite ministers. Others such as Daniel and Catherine Fry who had married in Huntingdon county in integrated more into mainstream society. Curiously one Frey family, whose forebear was a fifer in the Revolutionary War, changed their name to Fry and then, much later, back to Frey. He served his sentence in Tasmania and then moved to Jamison, Victoria with his family. Later came Fry settlers, such as: They acquired Crendon farm in and the family now sells farm machinery there. Select Fry Miscellany If you would like to read more, click on the miscellany page for further stories and accounts: Joshua Fry was a suveyor and mapmaker in 18th century colonial Virginia. Elizabeth Fry, a Quaker relative to the chocolate Frys, was an early 19th century prison reformer. Charles Burgess Fry was a larger-than life cricketer, educator, and writer of the Edwardian era. Stephen Fry is an English comic writer and TV personality. Select Frys Today 16, in the UK most numerous in Gloucestershire 15, in America most numerous in Pennsylvania 12, elsewhere most numerous in Australia.
